MIL CITY

Cold Calling VA — House Rules & Standards of Conduct

For all Virtual Assistants handling outbound/inbound calls, order capture, and lead follow-up

1. Purpose of This Document

This sets the standard for how every Virtual Assistant (VA) represents MIL CITY on the phone, in email, and inside our tracking systems. It combines two things:

- Our official Call Guide ("the Bible") — scripts, objection handling, pricing anchors, and follow-up cadence.
- Our house rules on conduct — respect, honesty, and transparency, especially around payments and reporting.

Following the script gets a prospect on the phone. Following the house rules is what keeps this company running long-term, with a team that trusts each other and clients who trust us. Both matter equally, and violations of the house rules are taken at least as seriously as missing sales targets.

2. Professional Conduct & Respect

Rule 1: Treat every teammate with respect.

- No shouting, mocking, talking over teammates on calls/meetings, or dismissive language in Discord or Messenger, threads.
- Disagree with a process or a teammate's approach openly and directly — with them or a supervisor — never behind their back.
- Help a teammate who is stuck on a call, an objection, or a tool issue whenever you're able to. We win leads as a team.

Rule 2: Treat every prospect with respect — even a hostile one.

- If someone says no, thank them and close the call per the script ("Apologies, removing you from our list — have a great day. Bye!"). No arguing, guilt-tripping, or repeat calls after a clear no.
- Never raise your voice, curse, or mock a prospect — during the call or after you hang up.

Rule 3: No harassment or discriminatory remarks — zero tolerance.

- This covers comments about a prospect's or teammate's accent, gender, race, religion, or anything unrelated to the business.

3. Transparency & Honesty (Non-Negotiable)

Rule 4: Never lie on the payment tracker or order log.

- Every order, payment status, and delivery update is entered exactly as it stands — no marking "paid" before it clears, no marking "delivered" before confirmation, no backdating entries.
- Unsure of a status? Mark it "pending confirmation" and flag your supervisor. "I don't know yet" is always fine. A false entry is not.

- Made a data-entry mistake? Correct it immediately and tell your supervisor — don't quietly edit it and hope no one notices.

Rule 5: Never fabricate call notes or lead status.

- Don't mark a lead “Hot” or “Warm” to look productive if it isn't — Interest Level must reflect what actually happened on the call.
- Don't log a call as “contacted” if it only reached voicemail, and don't invent details in the notes field.

Rule 6: Represent the company honestly on the call.

- Use your real first name or assigned caller name consistently — don't switch identities across calls to the same prospect.
- On accreditation, use the approved honest answer: we're still in the process of getting NABP/VAWD/BOP accreditation, we work with licensed pharmacies/wholesalers, and products are sealed, unexpired, and sourced from verified channels. Never claim an accreditation we don't have.
- Don't invent shipping timelines, stock levels, or pricing outside the current Price Anchor / Inventory / GLP-1 List. If you don't know a number, say you'll confirm and follow up.

Rule 7: Report problems immediately, not after they escalate.

- An angry prospect, a mistake on an order, a system that's down — flag it the moment it happens. Hiding a problem always makes it worse for the team and the client relationship.

4. Call Guide — Openings, Pitch, and Close

This reflects our official Call Guide. Use it as your default script; keep the structure and the approved language, especially anything about pricing, accreditation, or payment terms.

4.1 Opening Lines

- Direct: “Hi, can I speak with the Purchasing Manager?”
- Conversational: “Hi, I was hoping to speak with whoever handles your diabetic supply orders? Can you help me with that?”
- With Company Intro: “Hi, this is (agent name) with MIL CITY — I was just calling to see if you guys carry diabetic supplies?”

If you reach a decision maker by accident and they show no interest at all: apologize, remove them from the list, mark the record RED, and end the call politely.

4.2 Gatekeeper Flow

- If asked “What is this about?”: “We supply diabetic products at wholesale pricing — I just wanted to connect with whoever handles that for you.”
- Goal for every gatekeeper call: the decision maker's name, an email address, and a callback time.
- If offered email only: “Sure — what's the best email?” then try “I'll send it now — are they available for a quick 30 seconds?”
- If the decision maker isn't available: “No problem — when's the best time to reach them?”

4.3 Decision Maker Flow

- Open: “Hi [PM/GK NAME], this is (CALLER NAME) with MIL CITY — quick question, do you currently order diabetic supplies?”
- Discovery: ask what products they carry (Mounjaro, Ozempic, Dexcom, FreeStyle Libre, etc.) and how often they restock.
- Pause and let them talk — identify the real pain point: backorders, high prices, low margins, or out-of-stock issues.
- Match your pitch to the pain point (Diabetes Focus, GLP-1 Shortage, Retail/Elderly, Respiratory, Margin Complaint, High-Cost Meds) — pick the one that fits, don't recite all of them.

4.4 Value Pitch & Power Close

- Core line: “We offer better pricing, free next day shipping, and pay upon delivery so there's zero risk on your end.”
- Power close: “If I can help you lower costs, avoid backorders, and you don't pay until delivery — should we try a small order today?”
- Transition to close: “Let me send this over — are you in front of your computer?” Then walk them through the price anchor and inventory list.
- If they're not at a computer: “No worries, I figured,” then lock in a specific callback window (“When would you be able to take a quick look — later today or tomorrow?”) and confirm the callback time back to them.

4.5 Objection Handling — Approved Responses

Use these as written. If a prospect asks something not covered here, say you'll find out and follow up rather than guessing.

Objection / Question	Approved Response
We already have a supplier	“That makes sense — most pharmacies we work with do. They usually keep their main supplier and just use us as backup when pricing or availability is better. If I can help you save on certain items or fill gaps when something's on backorder, would that be useful?”
Are you NABP/VAWD/BOP accredited?	“That's a great question — we're actually still in the process of getting our accreditation. That said, we already work with licensed pharmacies and wholesalers, and all of our products are sealed, unexpired, and sourced from verified channels. Most clients start with a small test order to get comfortable — would that make sense for you too?”
What is Pay Upon Delivery?	“Pay Upon Delivery means zero risk on your end. We ship first, you receive it, check everything — expiration, condition — and only then do you pay. It helps with cash flow since you're not paying upfront. Want to try your first order under those terms?”
Do you have a minimum order?	“No minimums at all. Order as little or as much as you need, and shipping is still free. How many would you typically need for your next order?”
How fast is shipping?	“We typically ship within 1–2 business days, and can expedite urgent orders. If we set this up today, we can get it moving right away — want me to line that up?”
What are the expiration dates?	“All products are sealed and unexpired. We carry standard inventory (7 months or longer) and short-dated (3–5 months) at a better price. Would you prefer longer dates, or higher margins with shorter dates?”

Objection / Question	Approved Response
Where do you get your inventory?	"We source directly from licensed U.S. wholesalers and distributors. Every unit has proper lot numbers and expiration dates. If I can save you on your next order, would it be worth trying us out?"
Do I need to sign a contract?	"Not at all — no contracts. Use us whenever you need, regularly or as a backup. Would you be open to trying a small order first?"
Why are your prices lower?	"We work with multiple wholesalers and move inventory quickly, which keeps us competitive. We're focused on long-term relationships, so the pricing has to make sense for our partners. If I can show better margins on a few items, would you be open to comparing?"

4.6 Follow-Up Cadence

Lead Status	Call Cadence	Email Cadence
Hot	Every 2 days	Every 2 days
Warm	Every 2 days	Every 2 days
Cold	Per supervisor guidance	Per supervisor guidance

Ask on every call: "When should I follow up after you review?" so the callback time comes from the prospect, not a guess.

4.7 Order Capture — Required Fields

Every order must be captured with all of the following before it's logged as confirmed:

- Business name, contact person, and contact number
- Email address
- Shipping address
- Order details (product, quantity, price)
- Verbal confirmation read back to the prospect: "So I have [Product], [Qty], going to [Address] — all set?"

Do not mark an order as confirmed until the prospect has verbally confirmed the read-back. This protects both the client and you if there's a dispute later.

4.8 Pharmacy Lead Sheet

Log every meaningful call in the lead tracker with: pharmacy name, address, phone, email, contact person and role; products they carry (Dexcom/Libre, GLP-1, Insulin, other); current supplier; pricing feedback; pain points (backorders, pricing, margins, other); Interest Level (Hot/Warm/Cold); objections/notes; next step and dates (called, callback, email follow-up).

5. Quick Reference — Do's and Don'ts

- DO: use the approved scripts and pricing anchors as written.
- DO: log every call, order, and payment status accurately and promptly.

- DO: escalate uncertainty, mistakes, and problems immediately.
- DO: treat every teammate and every prospect with respect, including on a hard call.
- DON'T: mark anything “paid,” “delivered,” or “hot” that isn't actually true yet.
- DON'T: claim an accreditation, price, or stock level that isn't approved or confirmed.
- DON'T: keep calling a prospect who has clearly said no.
- DON'T: cover up a mistake instead of reporting it.

6. What Happens When Rules Are Broken

Issue	Response
First honest mistake (wrong entry, missed cadence)	Coaching conversation, correct the record together — no penalty for owning it quickly.
Repeated carelessness after coaching	Written warning and a short performance check-in.
Any falsified entry on the payment/order tracker or lead status	Treated as a serious integrity issue — immediate review with leadership, up to termination.
Disrespect toward a teammate or prospect	Immediate conversation with leadership; repeated incidents affect standing on the team.
Misrepresenting accreditation, pricing, or sourcing to a prospect	Immediate coaching and script review; repeated incidents are an integrity issue.

Honest mistakes are part of learning the job and are handled with coaching, not punishment. What's never acceptable is dishonesty about a mistake, a payment, or a lead status — that's the line that protects the whole team's credibility with clients and with each other.

7. Acknowledgment

By working calls for MIL CITY, every VA agrees to follow the scripts and standards in this document, to keep the payment tracker and lead records honest and current, and to treat teammates and prospects with respect at all times.
